WISCONSIN OUTSIDE | February 2025

A NOTE FROM THE DIRECTOR

Late last year, just before the holidays, the U.S. Bureau of Economic Analysis released its annual economic data on the outdoor recreation industry, and again, the industry had a record year, contributing over $1.2 trillion (gross output) to the U.S. economy and supporting over 5 million jobs nationwide in 2023. In Wisconsin, the growth of the outdoor recreation industry outpaced the national average, generating $11.2 billion for the state's gross domestic product.

These record-breaking numbers demonstrate how valuable outdoor recreation is to Wisconsin's economy. While an important benchmark, they don't always provide a full picture of outdoor recreation's impact. To help shed light on that important point and answer the most popular question the Office hears from stakeholders, "What is the economic impact of outdoor recreation in my community?" we were pleased to pilot the Do-It-Yourself Economic Impact Report program last year. With the help of The Harbinger Consultancy, five communities and organizations completed the program and have just released their reports detailing a collective $27.3 million in local economic activity from outdoor recreation. Not only did participants learn how to calculate that all-important and previously elusive figure, but throughout the process, they also learned how to gather data and operationalize those efforts to continue learning about visitors and their behaviors into the future.

Want to learn how they did it? At this year's Wisconsin Governor's Conference on Tourism (WIGCOT), March 9-11 in La Crosse, we'll be hosting a panel of program participants who can share their experiences and insights. Join us at WIGCOT for outdoor recreation inspiration as we celebrate the boundless potential for Wisconsin tourism and our outdoor economy. Register here.

Can't make the conference? Download the Do-It-Yourself Guide: Conducting Visitor and Recreational User Research to Tell an Economic Impact Story on our website. This new, free tool can help communities and organizations unlock the power of knowing how to calculate economic impact.

For even more learning, networking and engagement opportunities this spring, please mark your calendar to join us at the International Trails Summit in Madison, April 15-17. As a conference sponsor, the Wisconsin Office of Outdoor Recreation will be offering Wisconsin attendees a special discounted registration to help you take advantage of this international conference in our backyard. Stay tuned for more details coming soon. In the meantime, check out the field trips and workshops schedule!

Don't miss your chance to join us and other outdoor recreation professionals at one (or both!) of these conferences. We hope to see you out there!

Outdoor Recreation Events: Bringing Economics and Engagement to the Finish Line

The 51st year of the American Birkebeiner is coming soon, Feb. 19-23. This weeklong event will bring 40,000 participants and spectators to the rural communities of Sawyer and Bayfield counties. According to some estimates, this event will bring over $20 million to the area. The popularity of the "Birkie lifestyle" is accelerating housing growth and supporting businesses in the region. Events such as the Fat Bike Birkie, Shred de She and Birkie Trail Race utilize the same ski trails for other sports year-round, providing more getaways for visitors to the region – to visit or invest in a seasonal home.

Few events in Wisconsin have the draw or history as the Birkie, but outdoor recreation races, large and small, bolster economic impact and spending across the state. From the Ride Across Wisconsin to races in the Driftless area, outdoor recreation events are getting outdoor enthusiasts out and about, on and off trail, exploring Wisconsin and driving economic impact while pushing their bodies to new limits. The success of locally grown events is making Wisconsin a key host of national competitions.

Fueling Entrepreneurial Endeavors

Not for the faint of heart, oxygen or endurance, IRONBULL's events are known for their challenging courses, their sense of fun and their commitment to central Wisconsin. Founded in 2018, IRONBULL was initially formed under the Wausau & Marathon County Parks & Recreation umbrella, receiving early funding from six community foundations. Today, it is a 501(c)3 nonprofit organization that hosts nearly a dozen events for fat biking, snowshoeing, adventure racing, running and gravel biking. Events often sell out and utilize outdoor recreation spaces in the area, like Rib Mountain State Park.

The rise of events has spawned entrepreneurship opportunities. Races require infrastructure like cones, signs and mechanisms for tracking speeds. Race Day Events, headquartered in Madison, organizes races across the United States. This event production, race timing and equipment rental company works with events of varying sizes, from community run/walks to the Chicago Marathon.

Driftless Endurance is a husband-wife team of ultra-runners whose passion for the Driftless region of Wisconsin and for trail running is combined into a for-profit business organizing races across the Driftless area. Founder Rickey Chernik said, "The core reason behind our organization was really due to a lack of races, especially ultra distances, in this region of the Driftless area... someone had to take the first step, so we decided to start Driftless Endurance." In their first three years, they've seen a 68% growth, from 288 participants in 2022 to 483 in 2024.

These days, races aren't complete without photographers capturing magical moments. For live-action shots, companies like Focal Flame provide photo and video services for cycling, running, swimming, and other outdoor recreation events.

Driving Tourism and Donations

Longstanding events like the Birkie, the Ironman and the Tour of America's Dairyland bring thousands of participants and spectators to local communities, but smaller events also have powerful impacts.

A recent report from partners in Marathon County, produced as part of the Office's DIY Economic Impact Report program, found that activities and events at the Nine Mile County Forest have an economic impact of over $3.25 million on the region

In 2024, IRONBULL's Red Granite Grinder and Underdown Trail Races drew participants from 13 different states. IRONBULL's events bring people to Marathon County who support businesses, restaurants, lodging and retailers. Local charities also benefit; the Underdown Trail Races raised almost $2,000 in donations for trail maintenance and building. In Baraboo, the Race Day Events' Devil's Challenge Triathlon at Devil's Lake State Park raises hundreds of dollars for the Friends of Devil's Lake in donations from participants.

Similarly, Driftless Endurance events draw participants from out-of-state, consistently averaging about 16% of total participants, which have come from 21 other states. According to Chernik, about 50% of participants travel more than 50 miles to get to a Driftless Endurance race. Chernik said one of his goals was to advance the Driftless area as a premier trail running destination, so encouraging visitors to experience parks and open spaces via their preferred sport is an up-and-coming travel trend.

Expanding Outdoor Recreation Trends

Wisconsin is staying on top of outdoor recreation trends, providing a variety of incentives to visit for fun and competition. Businesses and organizations across the state are investing in niche activities and competitions to hype up activities throughout the year.

Relatively new to the competitive racing scene, gravel biking is rising in popularity. Gravel biking takes place on gravel roads, requiring a different skill set than road or off-road biking. This year, at least eight competitive gravel bike races are planned across Wisconsin, with fun rides like the Escape Badger Gravel Ride and IRONBULL Essential Gravel also scheduled. The gravel bike community scores a win this year, with USA Cycling bringing the Gravel National Championships to La Crosse and southeast Minnesota in 2025 and 2026.

Every July, the U.S. National Kubb Championships in Eau Claire draw crowds from across the Great Lakes region. When the championships started in 2007, they had 15 teams; in 2024, they had 144 teams. USA Freestyle Nationals and Team Trials and the Midwest Freestyle Championships for kayakers and canoeists were held in Wausau in 2024 at the Wausau Whitewater Park, drawing participants and spectators from outside Wisconsin. The championships return in August. In September, WinMan Trails hosts the Midwest Enduro & Dual Slalom Onewheel Race, with Onewheels being a rising trend in outdoor recreation. Also in September, the Wisconsin Climbers Association hosts its 17th annual Boulder Bash climbing competition at Governor Dodge State Park, drawing about 120 boulderers and spectators from across Wisconsin and Illinois for a weekend of fall climbing in the Driftless.

Each event brings a new set of visitors to experience all that Wisconsin has to offer – and keep them coming back to explore on their own.

In addition to supporting local economies, events like those sponsored by Driftless Endurance are “developed in conjunction with land managers (like the Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources) to showcase unique features of the land while protecting the sustainability of the trails,” said owner Rickey Chernik. Taking Stage and Playing Host Wisconsin's welcoming hospitality makes it a great place to host events. Ariens Nordic Center in Brillion opened in 2022 and is an official national training center for U.S. Biathlon. The Center is already hosting state, national and international competitions. This month, it will host the U.S. and Canadian Masters Biathlon National Championships (Feb. 14-16) and the 2025 World, U.S. and Open Snowshoe Championships (Feb. 27–March 2). The prestigious events showcase both elite athletes and the spirit of Wisconsin's outdoor recreation landscape. The Nordic Center's ability to manufacture snow takes guesswork out of the weather.

This summer, Trek Bicycle will host the 2025 USA Cycling Collegiate Road National Championships in Madison, while the 2025 USA Cycling Masters & Junior Road National Championships will come to southeast Wisconsin.

Supporting Events

Outdoor recreation events take capital and funding to get off the ground. The Opportunity Attraction Fund from the Wisconsin Economic Development Corporation is available to assist Native American tribes, area visitor and convention bureaus, business improvement districts and private entities with funding.

The Department of Tourism's Ready, Set, Go! grant program assists destinations in securing competitive sporting events not regularly held in Wisconsin. The RSG program fund has $110,000 per fiscal year for matching grants.

IRONBULL's Red Granite Grinder race received a Joint Effort Marketing Grant (JEM) to bolster marketing and promotion efforts. In 2024, this race had a 22% increase in attendance over 2023. Estimates indicate that local spending from the approximately 400 participants was over $90,000. The JEM program helps nonprofit organizations market and promote events, expanding their ability to attract more event participants and spectators. Events are eligible to receive a JEM grant for up to three years. The Red Granite Grinder was in year two of its JEM funding in 2024.

Sponsorship from local businesses is another way to fund and promote events. Wisconsin gravel racing partners include Borah Teamwear, a Wisconsin company specializing in custom performance apparel, and Embark Good Energy, a Viroqua-based maple syrup hydration company. Partnering with local retailers and producers has led to success in marketing and promotion for both parties.

With a culture steeped in outdoor activities and a landscape that caters to a wide array of outdoor pursuits, races and events across Wisconsin are engaging new participants, creating more opportunities for at-home events, stimulating entrepreneurship and showcasing an abundance of outdoor recreation events for professionals, amateurs and the "just-for-fun" crowds. By the time the Birkie celebrates its 100th anniversary, Wisconsin will be celebrating milestones for other competitive sports races. But the real winner of all these races? Communities that benefit from increased visibility, new visitors and an economic boon for local businesses.
